

15-Minute Website Wins

Because Progress Doesn't Have To Take All Day

Why These Wins Matter

Even when you know your website could use some love, it's easy to avoid. It can feel like you'd need a whole day (and an extra large cold brew) to make a difference. But here's the secret: small fixes are kind of magic. They keep your site looking current, which helps visitors trust you.

There's No Pressure Here

You don't have to tackle everything at once. Finishing one or two items is a win! If something feels too tricky, add it to your Website To-Do List (or hand it off to your web person!).

The Outcome

Once you've checked off a few of these, your site will feel fresher, more trustworthy, and a little more cared for. And even better: you'll feel reconnected to it. Spending a few minutes inside your site can remind you it's not as scary as it feels when you're avoiding it, and that can give you the energy to actually use it to support your work again.

Let's tackle some quick wins...

15-Minute Website Wins

☑ Test your contact form(s)

Let's make sure your visitors can actually contact you.

1. Go to your website and fill out each contact form. Make sure not to skip any fields; you want to see what happens.
2. After submitting each form, did you see a thank you message or confirmation on the page?
3. Check your inbox. Did the email arrive to the email address you expected? Did all the fields come through clearly?
4. If anything didn't work the way you wanted, jot it down on your Website To-Do List (page 6) to fix later or pass along to your web person.

☑ Check your navigation links

Let's make sure visitors can actually find their way around.

1. Click through every link in your main navigation menu.
2. Does each one work? Does it lead exactly where you expect?
3. Notice if anything feels missing or outdated (like an old service page or event link).
4. Write down any issues on your Website To-Do List to update later or hand off.

☑ Update your footer year

Keep your site looking active and up to date.

1. Scroll down to your site's footer (the bottom of the page) and find the copyright year.
2. Check the date. Does it show the current year?
3. Update if needed. Look for a footer or copyright section in your theme/template settings (most platforms make this simple).

☑ Review your homepage copy

A quick refresh keeps your site clear and welcoming.

1. Read through your homepage text from top to bottom.
2. Look for updates. Is anything out of date (like old programs, staff, or events)?
3. Check the flow. Does any section feel too long, too vague, or confusing?
4. Set a 5-minute timer and make small improvements; shorten one section, update a line, or swap in a fresh detail.

Remember: You don't need to rewrite the whole page. Even one small tweak helps your site feel more current.

☑ Check your social links

Make sure visitors can actually connect with you where you want them to.

1. Click each social icon or link on your site. They may be in the header, footer, and/or contact page.
2. Confirm the links point to active accounts.
3. Remove or update any outdated ones. If you've stopped using a platform, take it down. If you've added a new one, link it here.
4. Test each link after making changes to double-check accuracy.

☑ Evaluate one call-to-action

Make sure your buttons and links are clear and inviting.

1. Pick one main button or link on your site (like your homepage, contact page, or donation page).
2. Read the text. Does it tell visitors what they'll get or what will happen when they click (like "Book a Call" or "Donate Now") or is it vague ("Submit," "Click Here")?
3. Update if needed. Swap in wording that's specific, action-focused, and easy to understand. This will help more people take the next step.

Add or check your favicon

That tiny logo in the browser tab makes your site look more polished and easier to spot.

1. Open your site in a browser tab and look at the very top. Do you see your logo or just a generic globe/letter?
2. If it's missing or outdated, go to your website settings and look for "favicon," "site icon," or "browser icon."
3. Upload a simple version of your logo (square, clear at small sizes). Most platforms make this a quick step.
4. Search for "your website platform" + favicon for step-by-step instructions. It's a tiny detail, but it helps your site look more professional and recognizable at a glance.

Bonus Win!

Run a quick mobile test

Most visitors use their phones - let's make sure your site looks good where it matters most.

1. Open your site on your phone and scroll through your homepage, contact page, and one other important page.
2. Check the text. Is it large enough to read without pinching and zooming?
3. Check the buttons and links. Are they easy to tap with your thumb? Do they actually work when you tap them?
4. Look at the layout. Does anything look squished, cut off, or strange compared to your desktop view?
5. Make notes on your Website To-Do List of anything that feels awkward or hard to use. Even noticing what's working (and what's not) is a win, and it'll help you know what to improve later.

Website To-Do List

As you work through the website wins, make note of any changes you'd to work through. You can also think of this as your parking lot - if you get stuck, add a note to the list and keep moving. You can easily return to the list later or pass the notes along to your web person.
